

The ocean's moods are dark and feisty.

Don't cross her path,
She'll smash you like a fly.

When she's glum and brooding She'll pull you in and smother you.

But join in her euphoria Learn to move and change.

Celebrate life!

Swim securely in her arms!
You don't have to come in Let her lull you to sleep.

If you find you've drifted too far

She'll bring you back to safety

As long as you move with her

And not against her.

That is the secret of surviving in the sea.

Tracy Crocker, from
The Secret of Surviving In The Sea,
by Louise Hurd

LOUISE HURD

The Secret of Surviving In The Sea

Use your phone camera to scan these codes and find me online!

